

Bringing renewed hope and comfort to widows like Imelda

Widowed during the genocide in Rwanda, Imelda brought up her children in the face of abject poverty. As each child grew they moved to the city to find jobs, leaving her elderly, alone and destitute.

By joining one of our savings groups she saved what little money she had, earned interest on it and took a small loan from the collective savings to make her home comfortable. Others use their savings to start businesses and make a stable income for their families.
