

Giving communities like Rosie's a better harvest

Rosie lives in an area of Tanzania where many people are trapped in poverty. Growing food is such a struggle that farmers are often forced to sell their land, but this only provides a short-term solution.

Rosie's community learnt how to grow crops using manure instead of nutrient-sapping fertilisers. They sold their produce and saved money collectively, ensuring everyone received a regular income.

Mothers' Union work to ensure farmers won't have to sell their land, households will have money to pay for their children's schooling and the younger generation won't have to leave to find work. Communities will be revitalised.
